Risk Warning

The financial products offered by the Company, including Contracts for Difference ('CFDs') are complex financial products, most of which have no set maturity date. Therefore, a CFD position matures on the date you choose to close an existing open position. Trading CFDs carries a high level of risk, since the multiplier tool (leverage) can work both to your advantage and disadvantage. As a result, it may not be suitable for all investors because you may lose all your invested capital. You should not risk more capital than you are prepared to lose. Before trading you should understand the risks involved and take into account your level of experience. You should seek independent advice if necessary.

4. Please note that CFDs are leveraged financial products and therefore, as such, trading in CFDs using the Company's 'multiplier' (leverage) tool involves high risk of loss as price movements are influenced by the amount of multiplier (leverage) used. Market Risk: Due to the high volatility of the Market, prices of most Financial Instruments traded can vary considerably over the course of a day, which may bring you profit as well as loss. Those Financial Instruments with volatile price movements should be carefully considered as there are higher risks of loss. Prices may fluctuate due to changes in market conditions which are beyond your control and that of the Company, and it may not be possible for trades to be executed at the declared prices resulting in losses. The volatility of the market can be affected by, but is not limited to, changes in the supply & demand, national & international policy, geopolitical instability and economical/political events or announcements.

Liquidity Risk: This is the financial risk that for a certain period of time an underlying asset cannot be traded quickly enough in the market without impacting the market price. You must acknowledge that some products offered by the Company may suffer from liquidity strains due to adverse market conditions, and as such, the asset may be volatile and have a higher degree of risk. The volatility may be reflected in a larger spread between the ASK and BID prices, resulting in a change in the price of the product.

OTC/Counterparty Risk: Financial Instruments offered by the Company are Over-the-counter (OTC) or off-exchange traded. This means the trading is done directly between two parties, without any supervision of an exchange. The Company sets the conditions for trading according to its obligations to provide the best execution for our clients.

OTC/Counterparty risk is the risk that, as there is no exchange market, the derivative transaction may not be closed out of an Open position. Prices quoted are established by dealers, which consequently make it difficult to ensure fair pricing to assess exposure to risk.

Foreign Exchange Risk: If a Financial Instrument is traded in a currency other than the currency of your account, changes in exchange rate may affect the value of the transaction negatively, resulting in financial losses.
